DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Crawford, (US Patent No. 6,781,608).

As to claim 1, 21 and 22, Crawford teaches a method for sharing data in a messaging environment, comprising: performing a search in a first application to obtain a first search result based on a particular set of search terms wherein the first application is being used by a first participant in an instant messaging conversation that also includes a second participant; transferring search data associated with the search over a network to a second application that is being used by a second participant in the instant messaging conversation; and without requiring the second participant to specify the particular set of search terms, providing, in the second application, a second search result based on the search data, wherein the second result reflects a search that was performed based said particular set of search terms (i.e., Crawford teaches a client application which can communicate to another client application for instant messaging (i.e., sharing) through a centralized set of servers e.g., IM server and other domain servers e.g., search server, alert/notification server and many other servers. The user using the client application can send instant messages to other user client device/application. The user can search the web, perform stock transactions and many other web related functionalities that the domain servers support/provide. The search is always done by search terms. The clients at both ends use this application. They both can send instant messages and perform web searches among many other activities. The instant messenger application (i.e., any instant messenger in the market) can send messages, texts (which can include search terms) to the other participant application. The second client application can use the same search terms sent by the first client application, because they both have search capabilities wherein a set of search terms are used to search for a content. The web servers/(search engines) have been providing web links/hyperlinks as search results for a long time (i.e., decades) including Applicant's own search engine. The search is not provided by the client instant messenger application, it is provided by one of the many domain servers that the IM server interacts with. The IM server essentially delegates various functions (e.g., search functions) to different servers (e.g., a web search engine server). The Applicant is claiming various searches e.g., news, shopping, auction, stocks etc., that are not provided by neither the first or the second participant instant messenger application and is provided by the various search servers that exist for ages including the search domain server in Crawford's. The particular types of searches i.e., stocks, news or any other types of search are non-functional descriptive data and therefore non statutory. Crawford also teaches that the client device where the client instant messaging application runs, can be a mobile device.) (Fig. 2; Fig. 5; col 1, lines

Claims 2-20 and 23 are either addressed or rejected in the rejected claim 1 above.
